

Toplines: National Survey on Immigration and the Economy

This national survey of 2,000 U.S. adults was designed by Morris Predictive Insights, LLC and conducted online from May 18 to May 20, 2026 by Verasight, a mixed-mode survey provider. It combines a 1,000-person nationally representative sample with a 1,000-person oversample of low-income adults (household income under $60,000). The two are integrated with a combined weight that holds low-income adults to their correct national share while drawing on the oversample for added precision. Results below show weighted percentages for the full national sample. The margin of sampling error, which accounts for the design effect, is ± 2.7 percentage points (effective sample size 1,323). Some questions were asked of a random half of the sample or of a randomized experimental arm, as noted. Rows may not sum to 100% due to rounding.

2024 Trump voter classification. Trump defectors are 2024 Trump voters who now say they would vote for the Democratic candidate, would not vote, or are not sure in the 2026 generic ballot. Loyal Trump voters are 2024 Trump voters who still intend to vote Republican.

Response	Overall

Experiment 2: Border/crime precondition for the economic bridge

Respondents were randomly assigned to one of three versions of an “economic bridge” message and asked how much they agree with it. Arm A presented the economic-bridge argument only; Arm B led with a border/crime caveat (secure borders, deport violent criminals) before the bridge; Arm C presented the bridge first and placed the border/crime caveat at the end. The first table shows agreement with the statement by arm; the tables that follow show the post-experiment questions (asked of everyone) by the arm the respondent was assigned to.

Arm A — Economic bridge only. “Attacks on immigrant workers go too far. We’re deporting immigrant workers who pay taxes and haven’t committed a crime. Meanwhile, grocery prices are skyrocketing, chaotic tariffs are raising prices on hard-working Americans, and people are losing their Medicaid coverage.”

Arm B — Border/crime caveat first, then economic bridge. “We need secure borders, and we should deport undocumented immigrants who have committed a violent crime. But Trump goes too far. He’s driving up food costs with ICE raids at restaurants and farms, deporting immigrants married to U.S. citizens, and using masked agents to take people to undisclosed locations. Instead, we should focus on lowering costs and building an economy where hard-working Americans can get ahead.”

Arm C — Economic bridge first, border/crime caveat after. “Trump’s immigration policies are driving up food costs with ICE raids at restaurants and farms, deporting immigrants married to U.S. citizens, and using masked agents to take people to undisclosed locations. We should focus on lowering costs and building an economy where hard-working Americans can get ahead — while keeping our borders secure and deporting undocumented immigrants who commit violent crimes.”

How much do you agree or disagree with the assigned economic-bridge statement?

Response	Overall	Bridge only	Border/crime caveat first	Bridge first
Strongly agree	43%	47%	42%	40%
Somewhat agree	24%	18%	25%	28%
Somewhat disagree	10%	11%	11%	9%

Unweighted N	2,000	659	662	679

Which comes closer to your view, even if neither is exactly right? (1) Mass deportation of immigrant workers is necessary to protect American jobs and enforce the law; (2) Mass deportation of immigrant workers is hurting the economy and raising costs for American families.

Response	Overall	Bridge only	Border/crime caveat first	Bridge first
Mass deportation is necessary to protect jobs and enforce the law	35%	34%	34%	37%
Mass deportation is hurting the economy and raising costs	53%	55%	53%	51%

Experiment 3: Enforcement framing

Respondents were randomly assigned to one of three framings before being asked whether the Trump administration's immigration enforcement is appropriate or goes too far. Arm D was a no-prime control; Arm E used a militarization frame; Arm F used a community/neighbors frame. The table shows the appropriate/too-far outcome by the arm the respondent was assigned to.

Arm D — Control / no prime. No framing text; respondents went straight to the appropriate/too-far question.

Arm E — Militarization frame. “The Trump administration has deployed military troops and armed federal agents to American cities and neighborhoods to carry out immigration raids, including in Minneapolis, where soldiers were sent into residential areas and killed two people.”

Arm F — Community/neighbors frame. “The Trump administration's deportation operation has swept up long-term residents — people who have lived in their communities for years, who work at local farms and restaurants, pay taxes, and have children who are U.S. citizens.”

Thinking about the assigned framing, do you think the Trump administration's immigration enforcement is appropriate or does it go too far?

Response	Overall	Control (no prime)	Militarization frame	Community/neighbors frame
Completely appropriate	17%	16%	19%	15%
Mostly appropriate	17%	17%	15%	18%

About Morris Predictive Insights

Morris Predictive Insights is a survey research and strategic consulting firm founded by G. Elliott Morris. The firm provides data-driven research and advising for clients working in politics, media, and public policy. Morris Predictive Insights emphasizes methodological transparency, rigorous survey design, and a commitment to letting the data speak for itself. For more information, visit morrispredictive.com.

Methodology

This survey was conducted by Morris Predictive Insights. Data were collected by Verasight, a mixed-mode survey provider, from May 18 to May 20, 2026. The sample consists of 2,000 U.S. adults aged 18 and older: 1,000 in a nationally representative sample and 1,000 in an oversample of low-income respondents, defined as those with a confirmed household income under $60,000. The margin of sampling error — which accounts for the design effect and is calculated using the classical random-sampling formula — is ± 3.1 percentage points for the nationally representative sample and ± 3.4 points for the low-income oversample.

Recruitment and data quality

All respondents were recruited via email from the Verasight Community, composed of individuals recruited through random address-based sampling, random person-to-person text messaging, and dynamic online targeting. Community members are verified through multi-step authentication, including an SMS response from a mobile phone registered with a major U.S. carrier and within-survey technology such as Google reCAPTCHA v3; members who exhibit low-quality response behavior over time, such as straight-lining or speeding, are removed. Because respondents are never routed from one survey to another and are compensated for every invited survey, there is no incentive to answer screener questions strategically. After data collection, the Verasight team confirms that responses correspond to U.S. IP addresses, removes duplicate and non-human responses, and drops respondents who failed in-survey attention or straight-lining checks or who completed the survey in under 30% of the median completion time. Verasight is a member of the American Association for Public Opinion Research Transparency Initiative; as in any survey, unmeasured error may exist.

Weighting

The data are weighted to match the April 2026 Current Population Survey on age, race/ethnicity, sex, income (nationally representative sample only), education, region, and metropolitan status, as well as to a running three-year average of partisanship distributions from the Pew Research Center NPORS benchmarking surveys and population benchmarks of 2024 vote. To produce nationally representative estimates across all 2,000 respondents, the two samples are integrated with a combined national weight that holds low-income adults to their correct national share while pooling the full set of low-income respondents.

Definitions and comparisons

Trump defectors are 2024 Trump voters who now say they would vote Democratic, would not vote, or are unsure in the 2026 generic ballot. February 2026 figures are from a separate national survey of 1,500 U.S. adults fielded February 6–10, 2026. The crime-and-border-caveat and detention-facility-label findings come from questions randomized between respondents. Subgroup estimates — Trump defectors (172 respondents) and working-class Hispanic voters (221) — carry wider error margins and should be read as indicative.
